

Concrete, a cold, rough medium.

Very hard to cure and sculpt.

Clay, a delicate "romantic". Needs different and careful approach.

The combination is a challenge.

Is there indeed a vulnerable balance between strength and sensitivity?

the pigments will fool your eyes they seem to be good together...

the wax will fool your fingers sliding on the body which part is strong and which part is sensitive play with the light...

sensitivity becomes fire and strength seems to disappear enough already

who really cares about levels of resistances

if you wants to take the trip discover

soul runs deep to the truth sensitivity becomes your wisdom

your balance

your strength
